

The original Insignia for the International Association of Lions Clubs was won by Dr. T. L. Ray, president of the Ft. Worth, Texas Lions Club. The contest was open to all Lions clubs and this was selected as the best design. While "Fort Worth" is shown on the club, the design became official and "International" replaced the name on the club. To make the contest more interesting, a $10 check went to the winner. The design was meant to be a "pun", with the "club" meant to mean "club".
